Record of Protected Structures
2010-2016

What is a Record of Protected Structures?

A Record of Protected Structures (RPS) is a mechanism for the statutory protection of the architectural heritage. Under the Planning and Development Act 2000, each planning authority is required to compile and maintain a RPS for its functional area. The RPS forms part of the development plan and must include every structure, that is, in the opinion of the planning authority, of special architectural, historical, archaeological, artistic, cultural, scientific, social or technical interest. Each building on the RPS is a protected structure and no part of it can be demolished or altered without planning permission or without confirmation from the planning authority that the proposed works will not impact on the character or special interest value of the structure. By including structures on the RPS, their importance is recognised and highlighted and there is potential access to grant aid for conservation works.

A planning authority may add a record to, or delete a structure from its RPS when reviewing its development plan or at any other time under Section 54 of the Planning and Development Act 2000. The Minister for the Environment, Heritage and Local Government (DoEHLG) may also make recommendations to a planning authority concerning the inclusion of a structure on its RPS.

A 'proposed protected structure' is a structure whose owner and occupier has received notification of the intention of the planning authority to include it on the RPS. Statutory protection applies equally to protected structures and proposed protected structures. Once a planning authority notifies an owner/occupier of the proposal to add a particular structure to the RPS, protection applies during the consultation period, pending a final decision as to whether protection shall be made permanent. The making of an addition to, or deletion from the Record is a reserved function, i.e. it is a decision of the the elected members of the local authority.

In relation to a protected or proposed protected structure, the term 'structure' includes the interior of the structure, the land lying within the curtilage of the structure, any other structures lying within that curtilage (and their interiors) and all fixtures and features that form part of the interior or exterior of the structure. The protection also extends to any specified feature within the attendant grounds of the structure (for definitions refer to Section 2(1), Planning and Development Act, 2000).

Protected structures or proposed protected structures are afforded extra protection under the Planning Acts in that the carrying out of works which would normally be considered exempted development, will only constitute exempted development if those works would not materially affect the character of the structure or any element of the structure which contributes to its special architectural, historical, archaeological, artistic, cultural, scientific, social or technical interest.

If an owner of a protected structure (or proposed protected) wishes to determine whether particular works to the structure would constitute exempted development under the provisions of the Planning and Development Acts or whether they would require planning permission, the person may apply for a Certificate of Exempted Development in accordance with Section 5 of the Planning and Development Act 2000 (as amended).

Detailed information regarding protected structures can be found on the website of the DoEHLG at:

Background to the RPS

The first RPS for the Sligo and Environs area was included in the Sligo and Environs Development Plan 2004-2010. Since the establishment of the first RPS, the Minister for Environment, Heritage and Local Government published the National Inventory for Architectural Heritage (NIAH) for Sligo (in 2006) and recommended the protection of all structures identified by the NIAH as having a 'regional' or higher rating.

The 2004-2010 RPS was reviewed in light of the ministerial recommendations. Additions and deletions of structures were made by the members of Sligo Borough Council and Sligo County Council as part of the process of making the Sligo and Environs Development Plan 2010-2016. This document includes the structures that were added to the RPS and omits the structures that were deleted by Council members.

The Record of Protected Structures 2010-2016 lists 299 structures located in the Sligo and Environs area.
